CHACE must apply for zoning change

If Minden CHACE Place's Prince Street daycare centre is to continue, CHACE will have to get a zoning change for the property on which the centre is located, Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Sinc Nesbitt said at last Thursday's council meeting.

In front of a packed council chambers - about 60 area residents attended the meeting - Nesbitt said that the only amicable way for the daycare centre to continue is for the owner of the property, Mabel Brannigan, to apply for a zoning amendment.

"I've looked at all the options and I can't find another way out," Nesbitt said.

The daycare centre - scheduled to open its doors officially today - ran into problems at the March 12 council meeting when Edna Trumbull, who lives beside the daycare centre, protested that it should not be allowed to open.

Trumbull said that the zoning on the property does not permit a daycare centre and that council was wrong not to have informed neighbourhood residents about the institution. She was particularly concerned, she explained, because she believed the presence of a daycare centre on property that abutted her own for 150 feet would devalue her land.

"I couldn't sell my house tomorrow with a house-full of 22 kids on my doorstep," she said.

Nesbitt agreed with Trumbull that council had been mistaken in allowing a daycare centre to establish in the Prince Street neighbourhood.

Since the March 12 meeting CHACE and Trumbull have been discussing the problem but have been unable to come to an agreement.

With no agreement in sight, Nesbitt said last Thursday that the only reasonable solution now is for Brannigan to apply for a zoning amendment.

Clerk-treasurer Bev Millar said that the application fee for such an amendment is $350.

However, if Trumbull or any other area resident objects to the amendment, the dispute could go as far as a hearing before the Ontario Municipal Board. Legal fees would then become a consideration.

Bylaw 14-67, the zoning bylaw now in effect, was passed 20 years ago. It defines the Prince Street neighbourhood as residential. Land uses under that designation include: churches, homes, schools, golf courses and senior citizens' homes. Daycare centres are not mentioned.

But last year council passed a new municipal zoning bylaw which, when it's passed by the OMB, will permit CHACE's Prince Street daycare centre.

It is not known how much longer the OMB will be in passing bylaw 86-26 - or what changes it may require.

Graeme Wales, a spectator at Thursday's meeting, asked Nesbitt if council could broaden its definition of one of the permitted land uses in the present zoning bylaw to include daycare. "Does council not have the option to define 'church'?" Wales asked.

"Yes, we could twist the thing, but the people who live there have rights too," the reeve said.

Councillor Verne Graham then pointed out that such a re-definition "would not hold water legally."

"How long would it have to hold water?" replied Wales, referring to the limited lifespan of the present bylaw.

Nesbitt reiterated council's stand that Brannigan would have to apply for a zoning amendment for the daycare centre.

"Following this procedure," asked Faith Aggett, another audience member, "are Minden parents in jeopardy of having their children's daycare interrupted?"

Nesbitt said his council had done what it could to help CHACE.

Brannigan, who was also in the audience, then stood up to read a speech.

"I do not believe that children devalue property," she said. "By making CHACE foot the bill for a zoning amendment, Minden is taking a step backward in time."

Edna Trumbull had told council she would come to the meeting to discuss her objection to the daycare centre, but she did not show up.

Reached by The Times at her home Friday morning, Trumbull refused to comment.

CHACE chairman Jennifer Ketner did comment on Friday. Ketner said she was disappointed with council's attitude to the problem. "They could have been more

Protest upheld Redmen forfeit title

The Haliburton Highlands Secondary School Redmen have been stripped of the Kawartha District championship and have been denied entry into the all-Ontario high school playoffs this past week in North Bay.

The decision to allow Fenelon Falls Falcons, the team the Redmen faced in the hockey final, to represent this district at the all-Ontario Championship was made at a specially convened meeting of the Ontario Federation of Secondary Schools Athletic Association (OFSAA) executive held Wednesday morning in Peterborough. The meeting had been called to rule on the validity of a protest filed by the Fenelon Falls team officials and was upheld by the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Athletic Association.

The protest had been made following the final game in the Kawartha District championship. In that game, the Redmen defeated the Falcons 2-1 in a closely fought contest before more than 700 fans at the Haliburton arena.

The protest revolved around the eligibility of one player from the Haliburton team to continue taking part in the game after receiving a five minute boarding penalty. According to the league rules, once a player receives such a penalty, he must sit out the remainder of the contest.

The referee appeared to be unaware of the rule while the game was in progress. Haliburton coach Gary Brohman said that the Fenelon coach attempted to Change clocks this weekend

Ontario residents will get an extra three weeks of daylight saving time this year as a result of a new regulation from the provincial government.

According to a notice circulated to the area municipalities from the Ministry of Municipal Affairs, the move to Day Light Saving Time will occur next Saturday night/Sunday morning (April 4-5). The notice from the Ontario government points out that the change will bring the province's clocks in line with those in the United States and provide residents with an additional three weeks of evening daylight.

The date for the return to standard time remains unchanged. That change will be made on the last Sunday in October.

Which way do you move the hand of time this Saturday night? The old adage, "Spring forward, Fall back" is still the best reminder. Move your clocks ahead one hour before retiring Saturday night. You may lose an hour's sleep, but you'll gain an extra hour of daylight.

Meeting told of hospital need

Minden and area residents got another opportunity to learn what has been planned for the expansion of the Haliburton Hospital this past Wednesday evening. A special meeting had been called for the Minden Community Centre, where hospital officials explained in detail, the construction plans and need for community financial support.

Member of the fund raising committee, Bill Kulas, chaired the evening. He introduced the executive director of the hospital Leo Doiron of Peterborough, his assistant Kevin Cummings, who is responsible for the Minden and Haliburton hospitals, and Barb Dawson of Haliburton, a member of the hospital's board and the chairman of the fund raising committee.

Doiron outlined the details of a study which determined the need for the 18 chronic or continuing care beds in the county.

He said a study determined that the location next to the existing Haliburton Hospital was best for the new facility.

The director told the audience while the expansion has received the approval necessary from the government, including an $875,000.00 grant for construction, an exact timetable has yet to be established.

The building committee is currently examining a number of design options with an eye to choosing the one best suited to the existing hospital and the new facility. Doiron said he expected construction to begin sometime this summer with completion of the work in about a year.

Turning his attention to the Minden hospital, Doiron told the audience that for the moment, it would continue as an active treatment facility. He said some $22,000 will be spent on the facility as part of the continuing maintenance and upkeep program. "We will continue to operate the building as we have in the past," he told the audience.

Kevin Cummings then outlined the costs of the new addition to the Haliburton hospital. He pointed out that the province is committed to $875,500 of the estimated $1,375,000 total cost. County and municipal sources will provide $266,400 with some $240,000 to be raised by public subscription.

Mrs. Dawson told those in attendance that the fund raising efforts so far have met with an enthusiastic response. She noted that various organizations in the county, have come forward to assist with the effort. Among the donations received is a $12,136 commitment from the Minden Rotary Club, the cost to furnish one of the rooms in the hospital. The Haliburton Rotary Club has promised $25,000 with various other service clubs and organizations making pledges as well.

The fund raising chairman said she was particularly pleased with the response from summer residents. Replying to requests included with the spring tax bills, she noted that these individuals were eager and willing to assist. "We even have a donation from Australia," she told the audience. "The individual owns property on Minden Lake."

The community fund raising efforts have also yielded excellent response, she noted, pointing out that a number of fund raising ventures are in the works for the coming months.

supportive," she said.

However, she said CHACE hasn't given up hope of resolving the dispute. "Yes, there are bad feelings, but I don't see why we can't sit down and work through the bad feelings."

Ketner said she didn't think applying for a zoning amendment was a good alternative for CHACE. On top of the $350 amendment application fee, CHACE would be faced with the cost of an OMB hearing, which, she said, would be a heavy burden for the association.

Let it pass

It would hardly be an understatement to say that hockey is an emotional subject in the Highlands right now. The euphoria felt by fans and team members alike following the Redmen's championship victory March 13, is matched by the despair felt by those same individuals upon learning the victory was not theirs to hold. A protest of player eligibility, initiated by the opposing team, has been upheld in two sets of deliberations. The title of champion and the right to represent their district in provincial competitions therefore passes to the other team.

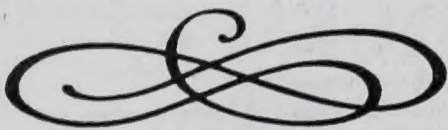

For those who follow the game closely, this is indeed a bitter pill, when having seen the victory brought to them by virtue of the team's superior playing and scoring.

However, as distasteful as this reversal may be for everyone involved, they must not let the emotion fester and grow. The community may not be pleased with the decisions of those who arbitrated this matter, but there is little to be gained by swearing revenge or fanning the dying embers of this issue.

The Redmen have shown they have the character of which champions are made. The community should be appreciative of this and let the bitterness of the moment pass quickly and quietly.

Good luck

Still with hockey, we would be remiss if we didn't add our best wishes to the many being heard for the Haliburton Huskies Midgets. As they begin their All-Ontario play-offs, we wish them good luck.

A scrappy editor

- by Arthur Black -

Whatever else happens in 1987 it looks like its going to be a banner year for the Grim Reaper. Here we are only act Act Three of a Twelve Act Opus, as it were -- and all around the rich, famous and not-quite-immortal-after-all are dropping like so many sheaves of overripe spring wheat.

The entertainment business has provided an unusually heavy harvest. Just look at the tally for the last few weeks alone: Liberace, Randolph Scott, Andy Warhol, Danny Kaye, James Coco...

But Death hasn't restricted his roundup to Hollywood entertainers. He's been busy on our side of the border too. We lost a Canadian by the name of Stu Keate this month.

Not a household name, I know -- and more's the pity. Because Keate had more to do with shaping this country than all of the aforementioned Tinseltown Glitterati put together.

Keate was a newspaperman. He began as a fill-in cub reporter hauling in the princely sum of $11 a-week and he wound up sitting in the publishers chair of the Vancouver Sun, one of the largest newspapers in Canada.

I could use up the rest of this page just listing Keate's many accomplishments but it would make for boring reading, and I don't think the honours behind his name in Who's Who in Canada are what matter most about this man.

What matters most about Keate is that -- near as I can tell -- he never sold out. Most newspaper people start out brave and bushy-tailed. Then, as they move across the Editorial Snakes and Ladders Board, they change. They get their edges chopped off and sanded down by mediocre editors and Nervous Nelly publishers not to mention the usual crosschecks that Life dishes out -- mortgages, car payments, braces for the kid's teeth, the grim realization that the world isn't getting any purer and they're not getting any younger. At 20, reporters are a feisty, fearless lot. By 30, they begin to dress a little less flamboyantly and they develop nervous tics around the corners of their eyes. By the age of 40 they are securely in harness for the rest of their particular heat in the ongoing Rat Race and far too busy keeping their heads above water to even think about rocking the boat.

But not Stu Keate.

He was that rarity in the Canadian newspaper world -- a publisher who actually believed in hard-hitting, investigative journalism. And he put his money on the line. He claimed that one of his proudest achievements was the fact that the Vancouver Sun, under his stewardship, was the most-sued newspaper in the country.

The legendary Keatesian scrappiness was not mellowed with age or tempered by retirement. In 1966, Prime Minister Pearson dangled the golden carrot of a senatorship in front of Keate. To everyone's amazement Keate turned it down. He laboured on for another dozen or so years, then took his gold watch in 1979 at the age of 65. Two years later he testified before the Davey Royal Commission into Newspapers. Now Keate by this time was a card-carrying member of the Old Boys Club. It would have been perfectly natural for him to stand up, harrumph once or twice, deliver a meandering paean to the vigour and farsightedness of the Great Men in charge of the country's print media and then sit down. Perfectly natural. Easy too. Instead, Keate tore a blistering strip of the Thomson newspaper chain -- not only his former employers but one of the biggest hitters in the Canadian media game.

"I cannot recall" testified Keate, "a single instance in which Thomson executives sat down for any informal bull session on editorial excellence, or how to improve the quality of newspapers."

Dammit, you just don't behave like that in the Canadian newspaper business!

But Stu Keate did -- and earned the respect and admiration of hundreds of otherwise hopelessly cynical reporters because of it.

I'd really like to tell you about the time Stu Keate and I solved the problems of the world over a bottle of Crown Royal at the Ottawa Press Club. Like to, but I can't.

Never met the man. Just heard about him a lot.

One of the things he said became one of my favourite observations on the confusing and perplexing condition known as Being Canadian.

"In any world menu," wrote Keate, "Canada must be considered the vichyssoise of nations -- it's cold, half-French and difficult to stir."

Not that Stu Keate didn't spend a lifetime paddling like a mad voyageur.

What do you think about...

Loving our enemies

As promised in last week's column, my guest writer this week is Will Wallace, age 9, a grade 4 student at Archie Stouffer Elementary School.

His teacher, Mrs. Bernie Davis, approached me some weeks ago to consider having his article printed in my column. It was originally written and given as a speech. My thanks go out to Will for his article, to Bernie Davis for her interest and to Will's parents Frank and Mary Wallace of Mindon who gave permission to have Will's article printed. I have chosen to speak on Hitler.

Why? I wanted to understand better why people hate him and if I should too.

I know a lot of people hate Hitler because he led a country - Germany - whose soldiers killed relatives of people I know. For example, during the second world war, fought between 1939 and 1945, my grandmother lived in Holland.

At one point in the war, Hitler and the Nazis had attacked and defeated Holland. At night they used to turn off all the power - all the lights, so that our Canadian bombers could not spot any targets.

One night, my grandmother's brother became very ill. He had to have his appendix taken out. The Germans refused to turn on the hospital lights and operate. My grandmother's brother died and to this day she blames Hitler and the Germans.

I respect her feelings...but I wonder - Should Hitler be blamed for this? Did Hitler have a reason to attack Holland?

I remember in kindergarten a person attacked me. A friend of mine came to help me and attacked the guy that was beating me up. I'll never forget that.

Sometimes it's O.K. to attack...but did Germany have a good reason to attack Holland?

Germany had been unjustly blamed for being the only one who started the first world war. All the winning countries took land away from Germany as a result.

Hitler wanted the land back and the German people supported him. Britain actually encouraged him to take his land back peacefully in the beginning - this happened three different

Over the past five years, it has been our privilege to witness a gradual change take place in Haliburton County Sports.

It's been a long hard road since Haliburton and Minden Midgets combines and slowly created a bond between players and fans which has reached county-wide. On Friday, March 13, this bond was cemented when the Redmen won the COSSA championship.

At the core of this organization is a group of young adults from HHSS who through football and hockey have given a new meaning to sportsmanship and team work.

Although circumstances were not in your favour, try to rise above this one too. Remember you have laid a good foundation, future teams will follow your example.

You have made the word 'Redmen' a name to be proud of.

Thanks for a great season!

Mid-March brings familiar and comforting sounds. The Redwinged blackbirds are trilling and flashing their crimson shoulder patches at dusk. Robins are carolling territorially and grackles grating like rusty hinges; near the gravel pit, Killdeer are crying stridently. Bird migration is well underway. By far the most numerous this early in the spring are the waterfowl. Already Tundra Swans have reached Long Point.

All along the Great Lakes, birds from the Arctic and the northern lakes who have gone no further south are restless and calling, magnificent in nuptial plumage. The little Common Goldeneye, splendid in green and black and white, started, with the lengthening days in February, throwing his head back until it almost touched his tail, whistling emphatically and chasing other males.

When there were no other Goldeneye in his area, I have seen a solitary male, playing the schoolyard tough, his head lowered to the water, his bill raised like a submarine conning tower, chasing the smaller male Bufflehead until he was forced to fly off. Now most of the males have gone. They will vie with Wood Ducks and Hooded Mergansers for a tree cavity nesting site

Glad to be home after second heart transplant

"We didn't go through all this just to have you go home and sit on the couch."

With those words, the doctors at Toronto Western Hospital sent Bob McCausland back to his home west of Gooderham with the heart of a 15 year old New Brunswick donor, safely tucked into his chest.

It was January 17, some 49 days after he was first admitted to the hospital for what has now become a fairly routine heart transplant operation. If everything had gone according to the plan which had been carefully outlined for Bob months before entering the hospital, there was a good chance he could have been released several weeks after the November 29 operation. There was even optimistic talk about having the Glamorgan Reeve home with the family for Christmas.

As routine as organ transplants have become, the human body still holds many mysteries for medical science. One that has yet to be fully understood is how to control the rejection response when a new organ is implanted.

Matching tissue types is vital. The use of anti-rejection drugs helps ease the acceptance. However, somewhere in the procedure, the host body and the new organ have to reach an accommodation, an understanding, if you will, that they can live together.

Speaking in his comfortable home on Highway 503, Bob recalls the feeling of elation and confidence that followed his first heart transplant November 29. Although weakened by the operation, his recovery appeared to be rapid. A few days after the operation he was up and walking the corridors, at Toronto Western, the orderly who initially had been his constant companion, was no longer at his side all the time. Christmas was just two weeks away.

Rejection

His doctors decided it was time to take him off the anti-rejection drug known by the somewhat ominous name of RATS, (rabbit anti-thymocyte serum). The drug suppresses the immune system allowing the implanted organ and the body to become accustomed to each other.

When the drug was withdrawn on December 9 however, that accommodation was not there. Within less than a day, Bob's condition deteriorated rapidly. By mid-afternoon he was under heavy sedation to control the pain created by the conflict between his body and his new heart.

"That's when I began two weeks of hell," Bob commented, "there's just no other way to describe it."

Those two weeks are lost to Bob. He remembers very little in the period and it is his wife, Joan, who was with him throughout the ordeal, who provides the details of the events. Those two weeks of trauma were as much her burden as his. "I never knew from hour to hour what to expect," she said.

The strength of the rejection grew until the heart simply stopped beating.

In one last valiant attempt to keep Bob alive, the doctors quickly reopened his chest and massaged the heart until the patient could be attached to a complete life support system. The emergency procedure took place right in the intensive care unit. There was no time to transport him to a proper operating room.

It is at this point in the interview that Bob talks frankly about dying. When his heart stopped beating, he was dead, his body had ceased to function on its own. (Bob noted that many people ask if he remembers any experience other individuals who have been brought back from death's door report. No, he commented, he does not recall any particular sensation - no bright lights or long tunnels or the feeling of floating over the scene of his "deathbed" watching the medical staff working. He doesn't reject the claims of other patients who have been revived, that these experiences have occurred, he simply points out it didn't happen to him.)

Joan had been informed of the situation and was told the doctor's were uncertain if the crisis had resulted in damage to Bob's brain, the first organ affected by an interruption of blood supply. Fortunately the medical staff had reacted quickly enough, as they were to learn later.

Bob was being kept alive by the phalanx of medical machines at his bedside. The life support system monitored all his bodily functions and carried out those which his own was unable of doing. While the machines provided a bridge, they were obviously not the final solution. Once again medical facilities across North America were notified of the pressing need for a replacement heart at Toronto Western Hospital.

The doctors, medical staff and hospital staff are aware of the time it normally takes to find a suitable donor. They were amazed to learn that a matching heart had become available less than 12 hours after the complete rejection. A 15 year old male in New Brunswick, had made his body available to assist others in need, and the match was complete.

The new heart was implanted early on the morning of December 11

Joan and Bob McCausland celebrated their wedding anniversary March 21. He's happy to be home and she's glad the ordeal is now behind them.

and once again Bob started on the road to recovery. However, this time the road was to be much longer and more tedious than the period following the first transplant.

Serious

Joan recalls that the first 72 hours were the most serious. Several times during that period, Bob was placed on the critical list as his body attempted to cope with the second transplant, the heavy drug therapy and the infections which entered his body when doctors were forced to open his chest and massage his heart.

During this period Bob was unaware of what was taking place in him or around him. While he spoke occasionally to Joan during her brief bedside visits, he cannot recall anything which had occurred during that time. "I don't know if I'm just unaware of what went on or if my mind is blocking it out, but I have no recollection of that time," he said.

Those two weeks are vividly etched in Joan's mind however. She barely left the hospital, preferring to sleep in the waiting room so she could be close to her husband if needed. She notes that the doctors always kept her informed and never held back any information. "They don't pull any punches...they keep you fully informed and let you know what the chances are" she said.

All the staff at the hospital were very helpful, she remembers. When the second heart was located in surprisingly quick time, hospital staff members from cleaners on up expressed their own joy to her when they met in the hall. It was obvious that many people who Joan didn't know were pulling for Bob during that crisis.

Between the second operation and Christmas Bob was moved in and out of intensive care several times as his condition improved or deteriorated.

On December 27 he left the intensive care unit for the last time and began the slow, but steady recovery that would eventually lead to his January 17 release from the hospital.

Bob recalls that during the recovery period he was plunged into a week of severe mental depression. "I had a hate on for the world," he remembers. "I don't know why...perhaps it was because the first transplant, which looked so promising, failed...perhaps it is something all transplant patients go through...the 'why do I deserve to live' syndrome. Whatever it was, it took a nurse to snap me out of it. She gave me a verbal kick in the behind that got me going again."

Coming home

Of course he isn't completely free of the hospital connection. Initially he had to return each week for tests and a check-up. That schedule has since been revised to every two weeks. The drug therapy continues with his daily regimen including three anti-rejection drugs, two antibiotics, one blood thinner, one high blood pressure medication.

Aside from contact sports, heavy lifting and additional salt in his diet, his lifestyle contains few restrictions. The doctors have encouraged him to be active, recommending a two mile walk each day and other normal activities. He has resumed his duties as Reeve of Glamorgan Township and attended the March 18 meeting of county council. Before the snow disappeared he was out riding a snowmobile and spent a day at the Toronto Sportsmen's Show.

Has the crisis changed him in any way? Bob thinks it has, although he finds it difficult to put his finger on any one thing. Always an easygoing sort of individual, what he went through has given him an even more relaxed outlook on life in general. Bob also said his own crisis has helped him to be more compassionate about the problems of others.

For Joan, Bob hasn't changed one bit. He's the same individual who went to Toronto Western in late November and she's quite happy to have the same individual home with her again.

It is a long road from those tense weeks waiting for the first call from Toronto to our Saturday afternoon interview March 21, Bob and Joan's twenty-third wedding anniversary. Along that road they have made many friends and supporters, some whom they'll never meet again. "It's just been terrific," Joan times. Then Britain refused to support him the fourth time. But then Hitler attacked, like any bully would.

When a bully comes up to you on the playground and says "Give me a nickel and I'll leave you alone." If you give in, like Britain did, he'll leave you alone - for a while. The next time the bully asks you for a dime, then a quarter. The bully, by this time thinks he can have whatever he wants. Finally he asks for a dollar. But this time you say, "No way!" What is he going to do? He'll attack, like Hitler attacked. Hitler wanted all his land back...and now more. The more became Holland.

Was Hitler wrong? Yes, definitely, but it was partly Britain's fault too. Britain like the student in the school yard, should have said "No" in the first place to the method used by Hitler and the bully. The student could have told a teacher and that would have stopped it, or Britain could have gathered all of the peace loving countries together at the beginning and said "No."

One other thing about Hitler bothers me - he hated

Jews. He kicked them out of Germany. He put them in prison camps and eventually he was responsible for killing hundreds of thousands of them. Maybe he hated Jews because when he was a very poor artist many of them appeared to be successful.

Now I know a few Jewish people. They are friends of my dad. They are really nice people. Hitler should not have killed people like them. He should not have been responsible for killing people period.

Do I hate Hitler? There is no question that he was evil. He was wrong, totally wrong, but when one comes to understand why people commit wrong, it is not as easy to hate them forever...even Hitler. He was WRONG and EVIL but I don't hate him, I hate what he did.

Someone like Hitler has to be stopped the first time they cause a problem, that's all.

We cannot let people like Hitler take control. We have to stand up against them, the first time that we come up against them.

Your comments would be greatly appreciated. Write to this paper, c/o The Editor.

Redmen lose protest, playoff berth

bring the rule to Brohman's attention during the contest, however he said he was unsure of the rule and felt it was the referee's responsibility to enforce the rules.

The player who had been penalized continued to play in the game which the Redmen eventually won.

The Fenelon officials filed the protest the following week, claiming that the results of the game should not be recognized since one member of the HHSS team was ineligible. The district committee to which the protest was directed, accepted the objection and suggested the two teams replay the game from the point of the penalty. Because of the emotional nature of the competition between the two teams, it was suggested that spectators not be admitted to see the replayed portion of the game.

The Haliburton team officials did not feel the protest was justified. They noted that the protest had been filed more than the required 72 hours after the completion of the game and questioned the value of replaying the game. After consultation with the principal Andy Hemphill, the Director of Education, Stuart Baker and the team coaches, it was decided not to replay the game.

The Haliburton officials were reluctant to formally bring their concerns to the attention of the Central Ontario Committee, as it was felt they had already issued a ruling on the protest. And so the intervention of the provincial association was sought and received.

At a press conference Thursday afternoon at the high school, both the principal and the team coach described the OFSAA hearing as open, co-operative and constructive. Both schools were represented by their team coaches and principals. Also in attendance were two representatives from the Central Ontario association and three from OFSAA.

The two teams had agreed to take part in the hearing with the understanding that the decision of the OFSAA officials would be final and binding to both teams.

According to Hemphill, the matters brought to the committee by HHSS officials covered four different areas of concern. They included:

- the original protest was not presented to the Haliburton coach until March 18, more than 72 hours after the completion of the game. Subsequent to that, Brohman was informed by a league official that the protest was "dead" and to proceed with arrangements for taking his team to North Bay. Brohman was not informed that the protest was still to be pursued. The full Kawartha executive was not in attendance when the protest was heard.

- that the Kawartha executive acted inconsistently in accepting the protest and ordering that the disputed portion be replayed.

- the league did not have an individual in attendance at the final game to assist the referee and coaches in interpretation of the league rules. As well, the referee was not sufficiently informed by the league of the differences between the Ontario Minor Hockey Association rules and those for high school hockey. It was suggested that in the absence of this information on the part of the referee, his decision at the time of play should be allowed to stand.

- the HHSS presentation also added several long-term recommendations including the suggestion that a league representative be in attendance at all crucial play-off games, that the home team coach be responsible for informing the game officials of the differences in regulations between high school play and OMHA play and that the steps to be taken in the protest procedure be clarified to prevent any misunderstanding in the future.

After listening to the discussion, the three members of the OFSAA retired to consider the matter. They returned a short time later to issue a ruling which upheld the initial protest.

The officials said that their decision rested on two main points. The first was that the coach of a high school team must bear the burden of responsibility for the eligibility of his players to take part in the game. The second was the refusal of the HHSS officials to allow their team to replay the portion of the game which was in dispute.

Hemphill emphasized that while the officials of the school were willing to accept the ruling of the committee, the responsibility for determining the eligibility of a player should rest with the game official or the league.

He emphasized the league should have a representative in attendance to ensure the rules are followed.

The principal also noted that the fact the championship game was followed by the March break created

Club presents annual skating carnival

Leading the way, four young soldiers head off in the Battle of New Orleans number.

With top hat and tails, the young skaters pay tribute to the Big Apple in New York, New York.

Once again this year, the members of the Minden Figure Skating Club presented their annual carnival on ice. The theme of this year's spectacular was Trivia, which included a variety of tableaux featuring all of the members of the club. One of the highlights of the Sunday performance was the guest skater Gary Beacom and the precision skating team, Vintage Blue. Budget shows growth

- by Bill Scott, MP -

Finance Minister Michael Wilson's third budget clearly shows that government expenditures are being reduced, that the deficit is being dramatically decreased, that the general fiscal framework of the federal government is being strengthened, and that jobs are being created for Canadians.

Since September 1984, Canada's economic record has been impressive. The real growth of Canada's economy has averaged about 3 1/2 per cent per year, second only to Japan and stronger than that of our major trading partner, the United States. The improving economy has created 675,000 new jobs and employment growth in Canada has been stronger than in any other major industrialized country.

Short-term interest rates are at their lowest levels in nearly a decade and five-year mortgage interest rates have fallen by 3 3/4 percentage points. This is equivalent to a reduction in interest costs of $1,500 a year on a $50,000 mortgage. Housing starts are at an eight-year high.

The government is committed to four fundamental fiscal principles: reducing the national debt, achieving sizeable, year-over-year reductions in the deficit, ensuring substantial, year-over-year reductions in the government's financial requirements, and ensuring progress through expenditure restraint and disciplined management.

To secure and improve Canada's international competitiveness, the government is pursuing a two-track trade policy. It has proposed negotiations towards a bilateral trade agreement with the United States. Canada was also a primary participant in the launching last September of the 'Uruguay Round' of multilateral trade negotiations under the GATT - the General Agreement of Tariffs and Trade.

In September 1986, recognizing the difficulties facing hard-hit regions and sectors, caused primarily by lower oil and grain prices, the deficit target for 1986-87 was revised to $32 billion. However, the revised deficit target still represents a sizeable decline from the previous year.

To keep on the course set by the government's November 1984 Economic Statement, a combination of management initiatives and revenue increases have been introduced. The government will defer $200 million from 1987-88 defence spending levels until 1988-89. The government is committed to achieving the objective of 0.5 per cent of GNP for official development assistance while still contributing to fiscal restraint.

To partially offset the cost of increased safety and security standards at Canadian airports, a $4. per ticket increase in the federal air transportation tax will be phased in over the summer. Beginning January 1, 1988, employers who remit more than $15,000 in source deductions per month will make their payments twice-monthly.

communications problems. He noted that after the break was over the officials had just three days to deal with this highly emotional issue. He suggested if the team had had the week that was devoted to the spring holiday, the team would have been prepared to replay the game.

Coach Brohman said the ruling said he was responsible to determine his player's eligibility, to overrule any mistake the referee made. "It was my mistake to have not known the rule," he stated. But he also pointed out that at the time he was more concerned with coaching his team, leaving the interpretation of the rules to the referee. He pointed out that discussing the rules in the calm, controlled atmosphere of a meeting is vastly different from the situation which existed in the arena. "I was coaching the team, I didn't have time to be the ref, as well," he said.

Brohman said if the infraction had occurred in December, it is unlikely that anything would have been heard about it.

The principal added that now that the matter has been resolved, both schools must find ways to heal the wounds that this disagreement has created. "We must take steps to improve relations between the two schools and ensure that any hard feelings created by this incident do not spill over into other activities or are carried on into another season." Coach Brohman agreed with that assessment.

The coach noted that the past few weeks have been a very trying time for himself, other team officials, the players and the fans. "We have received great support from the entire community" he commented. "The players have been with us all the way, the players' parents and key supporters have been behind us, win or lose. The players did a good job this year, they showed us they could do it."

Getting that long distance feeling

Administrators at Onondaga Camp have a problem.

Some of the campers have been phoning home. And they're not asking permission from the staff.

Instead - the children - who come from all over the world - have been walking to a public telephone at the junction of Deep Bay Road and Rackety Ranch Road.

The camp, located in Lutterworth Township at the northwest end of Gull

Lake, has been receiving letters from parents, angry over enormous telephone bills.

That is the crux of the problem, explained Onondaga Camp representative Peter Stribling at last Thursday night's Lutterworth council meeting.

Stribling said the answer is simple: move the telephone.

Because Lutterworth is part-owner of the telephone and is responsible for its location, council agreed to consider putting it somewhere else.

The junction of Bob Lake Road and Deep Bay Road was suggested as a possible new location. Stribling said the camp would pay for the cost of the move.

The telephone was originally installed for the use of residents of the Halcan housing development which at the time did not have telephone service. Since then, the development located on the Rackety Ranch Road has been given service.

Because the telephone is used regularly by nearby residents and passing motorists, council believes it still provides a valuable service to the community.

Township raises fire rates

Anson, Hindon and Minden council has raised the amount charged by the municipality for fire protection for neighbouring municipalities.

The reason offered for the price hike is to help Anson, Hindon and Minden replace their aging pumper truck when it is time to buy another.

Anson, Hindon and Minden provides fire protection for Lutterworth and Snowdon Townships. Lutterworth, which used to pay a yearly stand-by rate of $2000 now pays $3000. Snowdon, which has paid about $1000 as a stand-by fee since 1976, has been asked to pay $2000.

The cost of another pumper truck, said fire chief Don Booth at last Thursday's Anson, Hindon and Minden council meeting, would be approximately $150,000.

Also attending the meeting was Snowdon Reeve Bob Vick. Vick said that although his council is not planning to start a fire department for Snowdon, he objected to Anson, Hindon and Minden's decision to raise the cost of protection by $1000.

He argued that the Minden fire department makes very few Snowdon calls and that the new $2000 stand-by fee is therefore unjustified.

Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Sin Nesbitt explained that the Minden fire department is faced with rising equipment costs and that he had no alternative but to charge more for protection services.

somewhere in the northern woods. Perhaps I won't cut that huge yellow birch snag the Pileated woodpeckers have been working on; if one of the tree-nesting ducks should settle there, I may even see a shower of ducklings dropping from the nest cavity into the water.

But other Arctic nesters, like the Oldsquaw or Longtail, are in no hurry to move; the Oldsquaw hoot and cackle in a party that never seems to end. The sexist slur in their common name is ironic as it is the splendid black and white male with his floppish tail feathers who is most vocal. Still here too is the Bufflehead, smallest of all the waterfowl, a concentration of energy exploding upwards in swift flight directly from the water's surface. What an attractive couple they make. The tiny male, gentle and unassuming, with his large white head patches and iridescent purple and green back, swimming with his demure brown mate, her sombreness broken only by small white head patches.

Far out on the lake, rising and falling with the waves, float the long, sleek, white and dark shapes of the Common mergansers or Sawbills. All three species of mergansers pass through the Great Lakes region on their way to northern nesting grounds. Flocks of both the Common and Red-breasted mergansers winter along the Great Lakes. These handsome fish eaters are superb divers and swimmers. The male Common merganser, sleekly green and white with a faint peach blush on his lower breast and the Red-breasted with his green head and crest like a punker's haircut, and his salmon-pink breast. The females, with their rusty heads and crests and dove-grey backs, at first appear impossible to tell apart. But closer study reveals the female Common merganser to be appreciably longer and heavier with a clearly defined white lower breast.

Much smaller than the other two, the Hooded merganser is remarkably attractive in black and white chestnut. His name comes from his ability to spread his white head patches like a fan. This Merganser prefers some reedy cover where, his pattern blending with the light and shade, he is often difficult to spot.

These are only some of the waterfowl you may see without great difficulty during the ir passage through the area. Because of their beauty and size and the fact they are more often stationary than smaller birds, waterfowl provide an excellent starting place for the novice birder. Everyone recognizes affectionately the handsome and sturdy Mallard and the stately Canada goose. With the help of an inexpensive bird guide you can easily add half a dozen more to that list. If you are near a lake or marsh in these next weeks, take a careful look; you may be well rewarded.

Test propane tanks annually

by Doreen Hawman

Now that the warm days have arrived, thoughts of backyard barbecues come to mind. Many cottagers, campers and backyard barbecue enthusiasts use propane as an efficient fuel for cooking and sometimes refrigeration and lighting.

Be aware that the careless use of propane or propane appliances can be hazardous to you and your family.

Before using a propane appliance, particularly if you have just connected a cylinder to it, check for leaks using the following method:

(a) Make a soap and water solution.

(b) Turn the cylinder valve on.

(c) Spread the soap and water solution over the connection with a paint brush.

(d) A leak will cause the solution to bubble.

(e) If a leak is indicated, shut off the cylinder.

(f) Have the leak repaired.

(g) It is advisable to again test the connection for a leak, before operating the appliance.

WARNING: Never check the connection for a leak by using a match or a lighter.

If you need help with your Tax Return, completing forms or having a question that needs answering, contact the Haliburton County Information Centre in the Municipal Building Milne Street, Minden, open every Tuesday 10:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. or call 286-4100. Speech patterns develop early

by Faith Aggett

Since poor speech development has far reaching and damaging effects on the child's personal and social adjustment, the responsibility for teaching the child to speak in a socially acceptable way falls to parents, teachers and other adults. How much a child talks influences his self-concept through its effect on the type of social adjustments he makes.

The major tasks in learning to speak include comprehension of what others say; learning to pronounce words so that they can be understood by others; building a vocabulary adequate to express one's thoughts, feelings and wishes and combining words into meaningful sentences.

Learning to pronounce words comes from imitating the speech of others. This normally begins at the end of the first year of life. Early speech is typically ego-centric in which the child mainly talks about himself and his interests. Later speech is more socialized in which the child talks about others although, at times, in such unsocial forms as name-calling, boasting and criticism.

After a child begins to speak, he talks almost incessantly, while he prefers to talk to people, he will also talk when he is alone, playing with his toys. The young child enjoys the sense of independence his new skill gives him and gives him a tremendous sense of personal satisfaction. He will even talk to people who pay little attention or do not bother to answer his questions. The older child, on the other hand, resents such treatment.

Without giving it much thought, some parents may delay speech development. There are some who discourage the child from speaking because they find it annoying. Some parents believe that the child should be "seen but not heard" except when spoken to. Others feel that it is bad manners for a child to monopolize an adult conversation. For whatever reasons, discouraging speech retards the child's speech development. Children ought to be encouraged to talk in the presence of adults so that the correctness of their speech can be checked. A good model of speech should be set for the child to imitate. And an attentive listener needs to be nearby.

As is true of motor skills, there are four essentials in learning to speak; readiness to speak; opportunities to practice; encouragement and guidance in learning. If these essentials are observed during the early stages of speech development, one can hopefully avoid speech defects and the task of learning to speak will be easier.

NOTICE

Under The Forest Fires Prevention Act

The period from April 1 to October 31 of each year is a fire season.

During the fire season, fire permits are required in a fire region

- for all outdoor fires except fires for cooking or obtaining warmth
- to ignite fireworks in or within 300 metres of a forest or woodland

A work permit is required to conduct any operation which is liable to cause an accumulation of slash and debris within 300 metres of a forest of woodland.

No person shall throw or drop live coals, smoking material or hot ashes in or within 300 metres of a forest of woodland.

No person shall smoke while walking or working in a forest or woodland during the fire season.

The regulations under the Act provide, in part, that every person who starts a fire out of doors shall,

- take all reasonable steps to keep the fire under control,
- ensure that all responsible persons tends the fire, and
- extinguish the fire before quitting the site.

Fire permits may be obtained from local Ministry offices or township fire wardens.

by Jeanne Sears. Call 286-1538

At the Tuesday senior euchre at Gelert Centre, winners were lone hands Helen Dugan. Others were Isa Hilyer, Bessie Burk, Ralph Schroter and Carl Francis. Next gmes at Gelert will be April 7.

Sincere sympathy goes to the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Earl Redner, formerly of Maple Lake, who died suddenly this week.

Guests one day this week with Irene Moore were Audrey and Bert Chamberlain of Scarborough.

The Martha Group of United Church Women met at their church hall last Wednesday with the usual Devotional program.

Sheldon Stevenson and Terri-Lynn Fearrey were shown on the CHEX Rotary Telethon on Thursday night, did you see them?

Joyce Hughes and girls of Mississauga spent last week at their home in this village.

Dorothy McElwain and Rocky McElwain attended a 25th wedding anniversary at Port Elgin last weekend.

Mary and Doug Kellett and Andrew spent the weekend with Gladys Wruth.

At the Anglican euchre games at St. Paul's last Thursday afternoon were Florence Schlosser, most lone hands, and Hilda Harrison, Marie Dennie, Freda Harrison and Jeanne Sears, the last two being men's. There will be games as usual for the next several weeks but none during Holy Week - April 16.

Larry and Karen Vick and family were at Ajax, Bolton and Vandorf on the weekend and also at the Sportsmen's Show.

Carol and Clarence Precor were at the cottage and also visited relatives and friends.

Beth Titus and Carol Ann of Orillia visited with the Bob Hughes and other relatives during the March break.

Constable Boyd and Katharine Jarvis, Joshua and Brandon left on Thursday to motor to their new home in Geraldton where Boyd has been posted. We'll miss you all.

All good wishes to Cliff Lacey and Bill Lilley who are still under the weather.

Audrey and Bob Vick visted Sunday with Cathy

The Minden Agricultural Society meeting will be held April 7 at 7:30 p.m. in the Minden Ag. Building at the Fairground.

and Dale Vick of Vandorf.

Good birthday wishes go to Sylvia Howard on April 2, she and Mrs. Myles are still living in their own home near the Recreation Centre.

Student's shows are going on soon, at Minden at the Gallery from April 3-11 and at Rails' End in Haliburton April 3-15. These are really worthy going to see and the winners get scholarships for their efforts.

Only coming event I have listed is the ladies "Sweep into Spring" Bonspiel on April 4 at the Minden Curling Club.

If you have items for this column, please get them in by Wednesday evenings as they have to be in soon after and I'm not home Thursday afternoons. Mild weather continues, lots of robins now. Keep smiling.

Folk talk about a woman's sphere
But there's no place in earth of heaven,
There's not a task to mankind given,
There's not a blessing or a woe,
There's not a whispered yes or no,
There's not a life or death or birth
That has a feather's weight of worth
Without a woman in it!

Destiny

I had a dialogue with Death the other day
As I strolled along, he came my way
He looked at me maliciously
And said
"We have a destiny".
I gazed at him with triumphant smile
And answered
"Not for a little while",
For I have miles to go before I sleep
And then my destiny I'll keep
But not 'till then".
His smile vanished and he slunk away
And I intend to keep him at bay
For I will choose my destiny
It is not for him to say what will be
I choose to stay for a little while
The world still has adventures that beguile
And so I shall hang around
For the beauty that can come Perhaps with Spring.

kid's korner

by Jean Lacey

Hi Kids!

Here is another puzzle for you with a word list. Look in the diagram of letters for the words given in the list. Find them by reading up, down, forward, backward and diagonally. They are all in a straight line and do not skip letters. Circle the words in the diagram and cross if off in the list.

It's as easy as that. Have fun!

Q. What does a baby pig like to hug?

A. A Teddy Boar

Q. What do you call a lion that eats ice cubes?

A. A cool cat.

Q. What has feathers, a big mouth and sits a lot?

A. A stool pigeon.

Q. What happens when a shellfish is questioned?

A. He'll just clam up.

Q. What does an oyster bring home from school?

A. Little pearls of wisdom.

Q: What makes the sea so salty?

A: Fish sweat.

Protect your children with proper car seats

During the coming month, members of the Ontario Provincial Police will be undertaking special efforts to increase the awareness of Ontario's seat belt laws. In addition to conducting stop checks throughout the district, the police hope to increase public awareness of the need for regular seat belt use for automobile passengers of all ages.

The following report by the OPP, points out what consumers should look for in purchasing specialty car seats for infants and toddlers.

Each year in Canada about 70 children under the age of five die and 4,000 more are injured as passengers in motor vehicle collisions.

Each year in Canada about 70 children under the age of five die and 4,000 more are injured as passengers in motor vehicle collisions.

Deaths and injuries occur in a crash or sudden stop because unrestrained passengers are slammed against the vehicle interior or are thrown out onto the roadway. Children who are unrestrained in a car, standing on the seat or leaning out of the window are in grave danger and so is a child sitting on someone's lap.

Adults, even when wearing a seat belt, cannot hold a child in a collision. The only safe spot for a child is a certified child restraint device. A car seat that hooks loosely over the back of the seat, or feeder seats and car beds that are designed for household use will not provide protection for your child in an automobile crash even at low speeds.

of the children under five years of age were killed during the five year period 1981-1985 were killed travelling unrestrained.

Child restraint devices properly secured will save lives, of young children in motor vehicle crashes.

Play It Safe...
Observe the Law and Keep
Your Child Safe in a Carseat

How effective are child restraint devices?

In Ontario, after the introduction of Child Restrain Legislation in November 1982, the average annual number of deaths for children under five years of age dropped from 19 to 12 (-36.8%) and the average annual number of injuries decreased from 1600 to 1350 (-15%). Almost two-thirds birth to 9 kg (20 lbs) have the baby face the rear of the car and the child is securely held in the car by both lap and shoulder harnesses.

To use only the lap belt with this device could result in the child being injured on impact by the thrust of the collision.

Parents must take the extra time to secure the child with both upper and lower harnesses. It is recommended when travelling along that the parent place the child restraint device in the front seat where you will be able to check the infant with a minimal distraction from driving.

Toddlers - 9 kg (20 lbs) to 22 kg (48 lbs).

Toddlers should be placed in combination child seats facing the front of the vehicle. The combination seat has a harness to spread the force of an impact over the strongest parts of the child's body. This device is fastened to the car seat by an adult lap belt.

Many of the combination child safety seats are fitted with a top tether strap which is anchored to the vehicle. The tether strap prevents the top of the seat from moving forward in a collision or sudden stop and reduced neck, head and back injury.

The tether strap is bolted to the rear of the car or on the floor of a van, station-wagon or hatchback. While some seats without tether straps are approved by Transport Canada Safety Standards Branch, the Ontario Provincial Police encourage parents to purchase seats equipped with tether straps.

The Ontario Law on Seat Belts sets out an offence for a driver of a vehicle with passengers under 16 years of age to operate the vehicle when the passengers are not wearing the complete seat belt assembly and it must be properly adjusted and securely fastened.

Seat Belts and child restrain devices can only save lives if they are properly used.

April is Seat Belt awareness month and the Ontario Provincial Police ask you to buckle up not only yourself, but also your children.
